The Pious Dodge The champion old man of the Unite The champion old man of the United States has been found by a reporter of the New York Herald. George Le Barre, the gentleman in question, is 115 years old. He has shook hands with Washington, has seen Lafayette and General Sullivan, and was considered a tory in revolutionary days. He was too old for the service in 1812, and was was too old for the service in 1812, and was not expected to volunteer in the late civil war. An interesting part of the Herald's account of an interview with him relates to a style of swindling peculiar to a period before the revolution. The pious Pennites of early times, like pious congressmen of to-day, had a way all their own of absording their neighbors' lands. The Indians would allow them as much land as they could walk over "without giving up." The Quakers accordingly hired a champion walker, named Ned Marshall, who could walk in 100 miles at a stretch. The Indians resented this pious fraud. They took a walk and massacred everybody within reach to make it even. The saddest pirt of the interview relates to the fact that Mr. Le Barre has used whisky and tobacco for a century, and probably can tell, as correctly as any other man, the dinerence between those articles in the honest days and the evil days that are upon us. Dialectic Language in Acting.

Away down South, during the war, there was a strolling company of actors doing a certain blood-and-thunder drama in one of the little dead towns then found on the line of the main railroad in Georgia. In one of the scenes of a little comedy which preceded the tragedy, the lover pulled a rose-bud out of his trowsers and showed it to his hated rival, saying: "I tack her to the kerridge, I roped her in, and she gin me this as a memento." The effect on the party who heard it was very convulsive. Afterward, though, in the tragedy, this gifted knight of the buskin had occasion, as the Duke, to be approached by a certain Lord, and informed of the death of the heroine. Upon being told of his friend's death, he gulped down a sob and said, "I knowed it, my Lord, and when he died I was appointed her gardeen." The effect "may be better imagined than described." An old play-goer who was present said it was the the richest thing he ever heard in his life.

He also states that after McComb first testified last winter about some of his rulings as Speaker, he (Colfax) some of his rulings as Speaker, he (Colfax) addressed a letter to the Chairman of the Committee asking that McComb be requested either to produce the letters or point to the rulings so that they could be examined by any parliamentary expert as to their corre

It has ner of using the surplus State funds. It has been talked about for some time past that the funds were not kept in the vanits of the treasury at the capital, but were loaned out to certain favored parties, the State Treasurer and other officials appropriating the interest. Chicago, February 3—The splendid new Sherman House, nearly ready for occupation, caught fire Sunday morning from an open brazier placed in the upper story for drying the plastering. The building is seven stories high, and there were fears that the flames might not be reached in time, but they were soon extinguished with a few hundred dollars' loss.

There was no change in the situation in police circles yesterday, the newly appointed captains and the old ones both nominally filling the offices, but neither making aggressions. The Mayor will to night send to the Council the names of two men for Police Commissioners, and it is believed they will be approved after a struggle. COMMODORE M. F. MAURY died at Lexngton, Va., on Saturday, aged 67. He was a man who had achieved considerable reputation in scientific circles, but who was looked upon by many scientists as a sort of humbug, a superficial experimentist. At the outbreak of the rebellion he turned his back on the governmen and joined the Confederacy, in whose service, however, he never gained much ce-

When we consider that Indianapolis and Marion county owe much of their wealth and greatness to the trade they have received from all portions of the State, the objection comes with a poor grace, especially so far as that city and county is concerned. Did the Indianapolis papers ever stop to consider how much the trade of Morgan county is worth to the Capital?—[Morgan County Gazette.]

It is scarcely necessary to consider what the trade of Morgan county is worth to the Capital. If the Capital gets the Morcan county trade it is not because Marion county helps pay Morgan county's school bills. It is because Morgan county gets the worth of its money here and can do better here than it can anywhere else, That's why it comes here, and the minute it can do better some where else it will go there. There is no gratitude expended or due on either side. And we may say we object to paying other people's school bills.

The very gradual success met with by the committee appointed to solicit subscriptions to the guarantee fund for the proposed exposition adjunct to the Indiana State Fair, indicates that encouragement, like confidence, is a plant of slow growth, especially in this community. Whether this is a conequence of a cautious, conservative policy in the part of the business men, or of the of a proper degree of enterprise, is a ion for others to solve. Similar projects other cities have been well supported from heir inauguration, and that, too, without the presentation of such inducements as are offered in the present instance.—[Sentinel. The slow work made in raising the guarantee is not on account of a conservative policy or a lack of enterprise, but of a lack of confidence, and a belief that the location is a bad one. The fair grounds are too far from the city to be reached with ease and comfort after night, and the history of all expositions has been that the receipts after night were the greatest. People who do not own their own conveycaring to walk a mile or two to reach the eam cars nor to trust themselves to a long way trip in an over-crowded horse car. There can be no doubt that if the exposition had been located on the Blind Asylum lot, the guarantee fund could have been raised in less than a week.

In the effort to restore the standard of matrimonial virtue and to abolish the obnoxious laws which have made Indiana the Paradise of divorce hunters, it is inensely gratifying to know that we have the earnest assistance and unqualified approval of Chicago. That stainless creature, that paragon of virtue, that stern and unrelenting judge of matrimonial rectitude, who drives off with a rod of iron every venturesome seeker for sinsedness, upholds us and urges us gle bless on to the right. "Macte virtute," which means go right ahead or ahead right, says Chicago, and waves her little bandanna handkerchief before she turns around to see who wants another divorce "without sublicity," and warranted to hold in any State. Oh, for the cheek of Chicago, which can put such paragraphs as this into its Evening Journal: "Indiana has at "last awakened to a sense of decency as "regards her divorce laws. We are as-"sured that her Legislature will, during "the present session, certainly pass a law prohibiting persons from other States "from getting divorces in that State. This "is a step in the right direction." Preably, however, Chicago is interested as a iness matter. If Indiana stops the Eastern divorce trade Chicago will get it. That must be the secret of such Christian ommendation.

THE PRESS VINDICATED. The Testimony of a Prominent Rep From the St. Louis Demo

If will not now be denied that the newspapers have been more than vindicated by what has transpired since the meeting of Congress. Mr. Blaine, Senator Wilson and a few others have given explanations which relieve them of the appearance of evil; but a dozen others have been dragged into the mire much deeper than the newspapers ever attempted to drag them. And the people have learned—what they never knew before—the extent to which their most trusted representatives and leaders may be induced to betray them, by the machinations of a powerful and unscrupulous corporation in want of Congressional aid, and able to pay for it in money or its equivalent. If the "newspaper statement" of last summer, so bitterly denounced and so generally discredited, had never appeared, there would have been no investigation, nor would there, perhaps, have been an end to the systematic corruption which it has since been the means of revealing. And although it may be considered ring. And although it may be considered cruel iconcolasm to have undermined the pedestals of several popular idols, we think it will be conceded that the amount of good to be ultimately accomplished will greatly overbalance the amount of heartless destruction that for done a manufacture and tiles to be a set under the second of the seco overbasines the amount of heartess destruc-tion thus far done. A man does not like to hear of his wife's unfaithfulness, and yet if his wife is unfaithful it is not exactly right that he should live in ignorance of the fact. that he should live in ignorance of the fact.

The Credit Mobilier is only a single illustration of what may be stated as a general principle—that the press is the most faithful principle—that the press is the most faithful of all public servants. We shall not say that it is an entirely disinterested servant, because its interest is in the direct line of its faithfulness. It so happens that the evil largely predominates over the good in human nature, and that selfishness is a controlling motive with many who do the business of the State. By watching and recording the development of this bias, the newspaper does double duty—as historian and a moralist—and the people are at once interested in the reading and instructed in the lesson. Newspapers may overstep the limits of truth in order to be sensational, but in doing this they commit an act of indiscretion to themread with painful interest by the public. e notices are inserted (contrary to our nal custom) free of charge:

They are not always intallible, but in nine cases out of ten they are more nearly right than their critics and censors in Congress or elsewhere, and he who reads them attentively for a year will be able to form a more correct judgment of public men than more correct judgment of public men than any public man is apt to make for himself in a speech of vindication, however earnest. Might and Right.

Might and Right.

There was once a little striped squirrel who chose a soft hillock in the woods in which to dig him a home in the ground, where he might live with Mrs. Squirrel and their little family. He had hardly commenced his work, however, when, in a feeble voice, a large black ant requested him to forbear tearing up the ground, "for," said the aunt, "this is my home, and you are destroying it." The squirrel was a nervous little fellow, and withal a selfish creature, and answered him very ill-naturedly: "I have chosen this place, and shall build my burrow here, so help yourself if you can," and the terrified little ant scampered off as fast as his six tiny legs could carry his body.

A lazy old marmot came waddling that way after the squirrel was quite wearied and had nearly finished his work.

"My impudent friend," said the marmot, "showing his sharp, long teeth, "you are on forbidden ground. Clear out, for this is my knoll, and I am going to build my house here this very day."

knoll, and I am going to build my house here this very day."

"But I have already built mine," said the squirrel. "and there is no good reason why you should rob me of my labor in this way."

"You can go elsewhere," was the ill-natured marmot's reply. "So get out of the way, or I will cover you with dirt." And he commenced throwing the dust and sand so rapidly that little Bushy-tail was glad to hop upon a log to wipe his blinded eyes, and rattle the dirt from his ears and hairy coat.

But the marmot had hardly ceased laughing at the neat trick he had played upon a weaker animal, when a cunning fox saw him at his work, and decided to avail himself of the same kind of strategy. So he lay down at the root of a stump and took a short nap publican. The ominous silence of the Indian papers.—Journal and Sentinel—in region the State printing business, continues suggestive of a renewal of the pecultreaty of the olden time.

The silence of the two "party organs" at Indianapolis, coupled with the fact that a tremendous effort is being made to put through the Legislature a scheme in the interest of one of them, is calculated to confirm the prevalent impression that the old partnership in iniquity has never been entirely dissolved. It may not be amiss to remind those organs that the days of the "cat-skinners" are past. The State printing, in all its departments and details, material, binding, composition, press-work, etc., must be opened up to fair competitive bidding.

[A Double-Leaded Article.] The law-makers at Indianapolis will please bear in mind this serious fact: The people expect them to so dispose of the public printing that every dollar's worth of work in that line shall be fairly and honestly let to the lowest responsible bidder. Any member of the General Assembly who votes for any bill that does not squarely provide for this will find themselves in bad odor. The present is the least favorable of all times for schemes of jobbery. There never was an era in our political history when political suicide was so easy as now. There are influences at work at the State Capitol intended to revive and perpetuate, in delusive shape, all the evils of the old system of State printing. The legislator who yields to these influences will meet speedy political damnation.

At last the petition for the appointment of Mr. Jason Brown to the territorial position has been, the Sentinel is informed, put in circulation. It will be a shabby oversight to omit the Sentinel's initial article recommending Mr. Brown from the petition. The Journal doesn't display that hearty support of the proposition that we had expected. It should be careful, the printing arrangement may be upset after all.

NOAH'S REAL NAME. NOAH'S REAL NAME.

It is said that the Chinese declare that Noah's real name was Ah Boo, and that he resided in Pekin. Unfortunately, Noah's family Bible was lost in the Flood, and we can not ascertain from it exactly what his name was. His door-plate, also, seems to be missing, and he had a very careless habit of neglecting to mark his shirts; so we are baffled in that direction. We have inquired at the libraries for a copy of the Pekin directory of that date, to see if Noah really fig. the floraries for a copy of the Pekin direc-tory of that date, to see if Noah really fig-ured in its pages; but the only copy any of them had was out. For our part, we do not believe his name was Ah Boo, or that he re-sided in Pekin. These Chinese claim every-thing that is going, from gunpowder up to newspaper. If we give them any ground on the Noah business, the first thing we know they will be out with the assertion that the ark was insured in the Pekin Mutual Comark was insured in the Pekin Mnt pany, and that Nosh used to give the Pekin newspaper people free tickets to go in and watch the animals perform. The interests of Christianity require that we should believe the Bible.

A BIG THING FOR A TREASURER. A HIG THING FOR A TREASURER.

Alaska has a public debt of one hundred and fifty dollars, and only seventy cents in the treasurer. These are rumors that the treasurer has been lending the seventy cents around among the banks and pecketing interest on it; but this has not been traced to any reliable source. If he knows anything about financiering, he will certainly not keep such a balance on hand very long. The interests of the country demand that, when money is carce, these vast sums should not be locked up in treasury vaults and kept out of circulation.

An exchange says that a clergyman in a neighboring village, recently, in discoursing to his hearers upon the subject of Jonah and the whale, portrayed in bold imagery the whole scene. He said: "I seem to see Jonah passing along the road to Ninevah; I seem to see him entering the ticket office, buy his ticket, and pay for it; I seem to see him walk upon the vessel; I seem to see them lift their anchor and the stately ship move grandly out upon the broad Atlantic."

The Value of Cigar Ends.

[Correspondence of the New York World,] I take from one of the Berlin papers an item that may interest many of my readers, and produce some good. In lighting a cigar, the end that is bitten off is universally thrown away. Some years ago it occurred to sundry benevolent spirits that this was a waste that might be stopped. So they formed a smokers' union, pledging themselves to keep every cigar end till they had collected a sufficient quantity to be sold to the snuffmakers. The union has grown largely in numbers, and the wives and sisters keep their husbands, and brothers, and friends up to their duty. The result is that during the year just closed no less than 800 pounds of tobacco was collected, and from the proceeds thirty orphan children were made happy with Christmas presents of new dresses and underclothing. Some idea of the number of cigars watched in this way can be had by considering that abount 6,000 ends go to the pound.

We now offer more strictly first-class investmenta than ever before.

A careful estimate has been made of the area of the timber lands, and the average yield of lumber per acre, and the alarming conclusion is reached that three years' stocking at the present rate of five hundred million feet per year would entirely exhaust all the pine lumber now standing.

WOODLAWN.

These desirable lots are in the Southeast part of the city, where so much improvement has been made during the last eighteen months. All the streets adjoining on the west are now graded and graveled, with brick sidewalks on Fletcher avenue, to within a square or two of the addition. The Woodlawn lots are within the corporate limits of the city, being but thirteen blocks from the centre of the city.

The large sewer through the southern portion of the city begins at the Woodlawn addition on Fletcher avenue, and affords perfect drainage for every lot.

There are many fine forest trees upon the ground. There is no trouble now on account of the railroads, as the bridge and tunnel make the crossing perfectly safe.

Some purchasers who bought last season at $500 are reselling at $700. Our present price is $600, but in a few months we shall advance to $700. There have been more houses built in Spann & Co.'s Woodlawn since it was put upon the market, than in any other addition in the city.

Did you notice in The News that some correspondent was attacking the ways of your office, and charging that due return had not been made of the fines collected for nefit of the School Fund?

Yes, sir; and in response I have but little to say. You, yourself, will admit that I can not make a habit of responding to the attacks of anonymous or irrespons pondents, but if any one, under his own alguature or by personal appplication, wants a full and perfect explanation of the workings of my office, they are at his disposal. It is charged that the books of the District Prosecutor do not tally with the records of fines collected made by you, and that there is a material discrepancy in the amounts collected by you and the mounts turned over to the County Treasurer. Is there a differ-

That I do not know, for I know nothing bout the accounts of the District Prosecutor. In the reports made by me to the Treasurer it is specified, in detail, name of offender and amount of fine collected, and being a matter of official record, is open to the inspection of the public at any time. In keeping this record there is no possibility of error so far as my office is concerned.

Why not? Simply enough. Suppose A. is found guilty under the State law, and is fined. The offense and penalty attached is entered upon the record, and has to be to make it legal. Not only is the defendant interested in that record, but also the officials of the court, such as the City Marshal and Prosecutor, as we'll as the witnesses. The first are entitled to their costs, the last to witness fees. Whether the fine is stayed or paid, or whether the defendant is committed, is to them a matter of importance, and they watch it closely. When money is paid in the officials demand their costs and are paid them; the same regarding the witnesses and their signatures, as well as the Mayor's the sleeping coach. receipt in every case, show whether the fine is paid or not. In my reports to the County Treasurer, due in January and July, I specify the name of every offender and amount of must tally with the official docket of the court. There is no possibility of deception.

But this correspondent, by the Prosecutor's accounts, shows that you collected during November fines amounting to $147 01, and had security for $104; in December, fines onths of 1872 you collected $622 25 and and prayer by Dr. Naylor, stayed $331. From this he deducts an averfines stayed $2,400; making a total of $7,200 for which he gives you credit of $2,517 04making a discrepancy of $4,682 96. Does this calculation agree with your returns?

Certainly not, because it is erroneous There is as much justice in his calculation as there would be for you to enter the County Treasurer's office, examine his receipts for one week, and on that calculate for that of a soap factory in Stringtown. year and expect him to show an equal amount in his annual report. His receipts for that week might be several thousands, and yet the week following not so many Hartford, Connecticut, offers to those desirhundreds, and you see if you average upon the first week for the year what a discrepancy there would be. For the six month ending this January my receipts on State fish and some cigars, nothing of value was fines were $552 16, but my report takes no cognizance of fines stayed. This makes an YESTERDAY afternoon some half dozen colored converts were baptized in the canal become the Yellow Bridge, notwithstanding the same that from July 2d to the 15th only Abromet, Agent. $20 86 were collected, and from that date to August 6th, $49 97; total, $70 83. From August 6th to September 1st, $145 46, three cases of which were $25 fines. From the 2d of September to the 30th I collected but $40 19, and this period only lacks one day of seing a full month. Such citations as these show the injustice of "G. S. B.'s" calculations and prove that a total estimate should be made upon actual collections, and not upon an "average." Have you reported for the past six months? You mean for the six months ending January '73? The office of Mayor is not one for which there should be a disgraceful squabble, and I do not care sufficiently for re-election to embark in "dirty work." Capt. Wiley's Death and Funeral. The remains of the late Captain Wiley arrived here over the Jeffersonville road Saturday evening in charge of Messrs. Sharpe and Vajen of the party, and Dr. Carey and Mr. Daniel Martin, who went to meet the From one of the party the following additional facts were learned in regard to the death of Mr. Wiley: At about eight o'clock Wednesday evening the party had reached Tunnel Hill, just inside the Georgia line, when supper was eaten; after which Capt. Wiley and Mr. Vajen retired to the smoking car, leaving the rest of the party in the sleeping coach. There being no lights in the smoking car, Mr. Wiley remarked in a jovial way to some negroes, "Well, boys, we are all of a color now; let's take a smoke," at which point Mr. Vajen returned to the sleeping coach, and the Captain was not seen alive again by any of the party.

When near Allatoona, a small town fifty miles south of Dalton, a broken rail threw the passenger and sleeping coaches from the track, but none of the party were hurt save Mr. Tousey's second daughter, who suffered a severely sprained ankle, and Mr. Vajen a slight abrasion of the cuticle on the left

It was at this point that the absence of Mr. Wiley was first discovered, and after spending an hour or more in searching for him the party proceeded on its way to Atlanta, where they first learned of the sad fate of their companion. The immediate cause of his death is unknown, but it is presumed that he fell between the platforms and was killed, while passing from the smoking car to

The funeral services of the late Captain Wiley took place at his late residence, 240 North Pennsylvania street, at ten o'clock this morning, and although the weather was fine collected, and this report is sworn to and most unfavorable, a large number of friends and acquaintances were in attendance. Dr. Holliday then followed with some remarks suitcollected, $145; stayed, $39, and then takes able for the occasion, after which the seryour docket to show that in the last six vices were closed with the singing of a hymn
